

PICTURES OF THE GREAT WAR—Cut Them Out For Your Children and Save Them

PHOTOGRAPHED AND COPYRIGHTED BY INTERNATIONAL FILM SERVICE, INC.

WAR LORD AND ARMY LEADER.

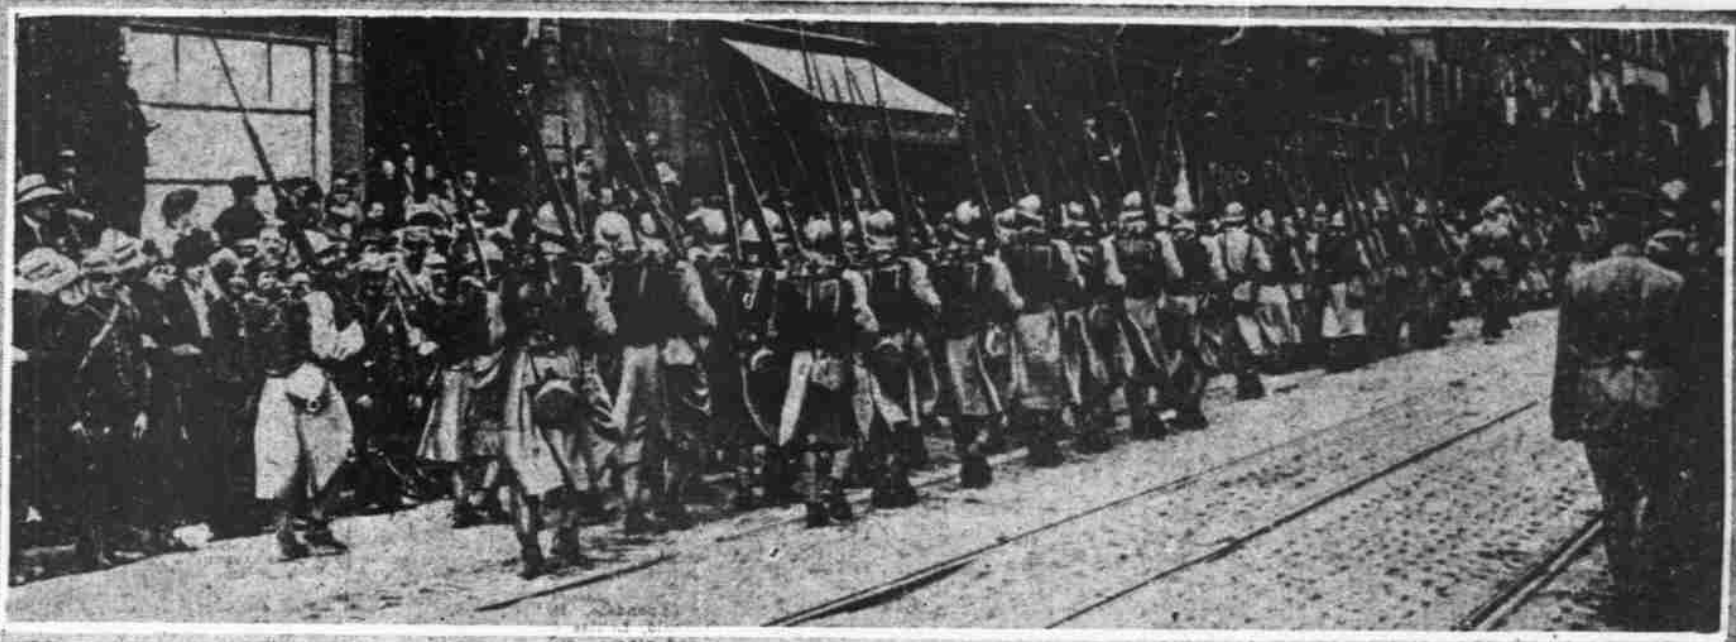

Here are shown Kaiser Wilhelm, the supreme war lord, and Crown Prince Rupprecht, of Bavaria, the chief army leader in the west. Prince Rupprecht's forces are now opposing the main British army in Flanders, and in the recent drive sustained appalling losses. Their front line trenches have been completely obliterated by the continuous British bombardment which preceded the successful fighting of the past week.

SIGNAL HONORS FOR FRENCH AIRMAN

This photograph shows an honor, that has hitherto only been accorded visiting rulers, which has just been rendered by the French Army to Captain Guynemer, the French "King of the Air," who is seen standing in the centre foreground. Captain Guynemer, who has recently brought down his fiftieth enemy aeroplane, at the time his latest decoration was pinned on his breast, was given the distinction of reviewing the troops who were turned out for this special occasion. He has long been a popular hero all over France.

POILUS FROM TRENCHES PARADE ON BASTILLE DAY.

Even after three long years of bloody war Paris still manages to enthuse every time the poilus march by. Here is shown a typical Parisian street scene on "Bastille Day," the fourteenth of July, when the French nation celebrates the downfall of royalty and the establishment of the republic. The soldiers received a continuous ovation from the time they left the barracks until they returned, nine hours later, after having traversed many miles of boulevard and byway.

HEROIC FIGHTERS CELEBRATE FRENCH INDEPENDENCE DAY.

A monster parade took place in Paris on the celebration of the French Independence Day, July 14, which commemorated the fall of the Bastille during the French Revolution. Here is shown the Colonial drum corps which headed the procession through the boulevards. Many of the drummers are decorated with medals for bravery during the great war. Veteran troops from the battle front were in the line of march.

THE BRAINS OF THE GERMAN ARMY.

The photograph shows Marshal von Hindenburg and General Ludendorff, Quartermaster-General, Germany's foremost military leaders. These officers are regarded as the brains of the German army at present, and their popularity throughout the Empire is unbounded. All of the generals commanding troops on the western battlefield, including Hindenburg and Ludendorff, were recently summoned to participate in the war council headed by the Kaiser.